HBO serves 'Dinner With Friends'

By John Crook

TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

An apparently happy couple find some surprises on the menu when they have "Dinner With Friends" in HBO's bittersweet adaptation of Donald Margulies' Pulitzer Prize-winning stage hit. Directed by Oscar nominee Norman Jewison ("Moonstruck"), the movie premieres Saturday, Aug. 11.

The story opens in suburban Connecticut, where husband-and-wife food critics Gabe and Karen (Dennis Quaid, Andie MacDowell) are putting their finishing touches on a gourmet dinner. Just back from a business trip to Italy, they look forward to dazzling their longtime best friends, Beth and Tom (Toni Collette, Greg Kinnear), a graphic artist and attorney, respectively, with new recipes. Their surprise when Beth arrives without Tom is nothing compared to their horror when, somewhere between the pumpkin risotto and lemon almond polenta, Beth bursts into tears and announces that her 12-year marriage is over. Tom is leaving her for another woman.

The repercussions from that bombshell reverberate through the rest of this engrossing and ruefully funny drama, as Margulies peels away layer upon layer of these deceptively complex characters. Just when you think you've got one of them figured out, Margulies throws another curve.

Kinnear, for instance, says he relished making his first appearance after Collette's Beth has spent several minutes convincing Gabe and Karen — as well as the audience — that Tom is a complete louse.

Prepare for 'Snow in August'

By Jacqueline Cutler

TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

In the summer of 1947, Jackie Robinson broke the color barrier in baseball, and the golem, a giant crafted from soil and brought to life through prayer, came to life in Brooklyn.

Therein is the premise of "Snow in August," a well-done TV movie based on the best seller by brilliant newspaperman Pete Hamill. It premieres Sunday, Aug. 12, on Showtime.

Told from the perspective of 11-year-old Michael Devlin, the story merges the gritty reality of postwar Brooklyn with the fantastic medieval Jewish legend of the golem.

Michael (Peter Tambakis, "The Sixth Sense") lives with his mother, Kate (Lolita Davidovich, "Blaze"). His father was killed in the Battle of the Bulge. His life is taken up with a vigorous load at Catholic school, serving as an altar boy, reading "Captain Marvel" comics and following his beloved Dodgers.

Michael's world forever is changed when he alone witnesses an anti-Semite viciously beating a Jewish store owner, and the rabbi of a struggling synagogue beckons him in to turn on the lights. (Observant Orthodox Jews do not work on Sabbath, and turning on lights qualifies as work.)

Rabbi Judah Hirsch (Stephen Rea, "The End of the Affair") and Michael quickly forge a lovely friendship. Michael teaches the rabbi English and about baseball. The rabbi teaches this Irish immigrants' son Yiddish and about the vast world that exists beyond Brooklyn.

'Law & Order' leads new dramas

By John Crook

TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

TV's motto this fall: "There ought to be a law." Several of them, in fact.

Joining long-running shows such as "Law & Order" and "NYPD Blue," an unusually large number of new network shows this season are set in some law and order venue, two of them from the creators of the above established hits.

"Law & Order" creator Dick Wolf, who managed a successful spinoff two seasons ago with "Law & Order: Special Victims Unit," is back this fall with a third series, "Law & Order: Criminal Intent."

Wolf's new series reportedly inserts a new psychological component into the "Law & Order" formula by investigating major crimes from the perpetrator's perspective. This fresh viewpoint means the new show is no threat to the other two established "L&O" shows, Wolf says.

"On an average week, over 60 million people watch 'Law & Order' in some form," he explains. "I think there's a huge appetite for the show, and ... I think there is about as much similarity between 'Criminal Intent' and (the original) 'Law & Order' as there is (with) 'NYPD Blue.'"

"What we are telling the audience is that you will get writing at a certain level. And the casting is superb. ... I think there is an audience of 60 million people out there who expect a certain level of quality and will tune in to see that when (the phrase) 'Law & Order' is on the front of the show."

The new four-part series 'The Human Face With John Cleese' features the comedian trying to figure out why one's countenance counts so much at 8 p.m. Sunday and Monday on TLC.

Learn from 'The Human Face'

By Stephen English

TV DATA FEATURES WRITER

When children draw stick figures, those giant faces aren't distortions. They represent how important faces are to us.

Your mug says a lot about who you are, how you feel and — as revealed in "The Human Face With John Cleese" — how the rest of your life might turn out. The four-part series airs Sunday and Monday, Aug. 26 and 27, on TLC.

Cleese is joined by Elizabeth Hurley, Pierce Brosnan, Candice Bergen, Joan Rivers and a host of sharp-eyed scientists who explore how the face advertises whether a person is healthy, what features people find attractive and why, and how the face can reflect a person's attitude to the point that it can predict happiness or trouble.

"I just never thought of all that stuff, but it's kind of obvious once you see it," Cleese says. The 60-something star of "Monty Python's Flying Circus" and "Fawlty Towers" says that making "The Human Face" changed the way he looks at people and, oddly enough, gave him a newfound appreciation for the United States Secret Service.

"I found what was happening was that I was looking more carefully at people's faces," he says. "I was fascinated by how bad almost everyone is at spotting lying. The fact is that these Secret Service agents seem to be able to do it. They really look at people's faces; if they're protecting the president, they don't care if it's rude to stare. Whereas most of us are inhibited from looking at people too analytically, too closely."
